Reimagining Teaching in Early 20th Century Experimental Schools

- Appraises the key tenets of the twentieth century's new education progressive pedagogy in the early childhood realm
- Draws on the work of educational theorists such as Dewey, Vygotsky, Froebel, Shatsky, and Freud
- Includes a range of international settings with a focus on intersections between psychoanalysis and progressive education in several of the case-studies

This book considers the diffusion and transfer of educational ideas through local and transcontinental networks within and across five socio-political spaces. The authors examine the social, political, and historical preconditions for the transfer of "new education" theory and practices in each period, place, and school, along with the networks of ideas and experts that supported this. The authors use historical methods to examine the schools and to pursue the story of the circulation of new ideas in education. In particular, chapters investigate how educational ideas develop within contexts, travel across boundaries, and are adapted in new contexts.
